Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

"The time has come, the walrus said, to speak of many things..."

"Of many things" covers a large area, but specifically an entirely new concept may well be developing at Sunset that could be the springboard to many changes and stimulation of many new activities like new buildings, refurbishment and new programs.

The crisis that precipitated an alternate position for me in lieu of continuing as Sunset manager may well be the stepping stone for greater accomplishments rather than the millstone it appeared to be. There is a big job ahead for everyone, that requires much dedication and some inspiration.

It could be the catalyst that cements this entire cultural program, and the master planning so necessary for future achievements. This includes you, the citizens of Carmel as well, for not only your monetary support in the form of taxes are necessary, but your moral support and enthusiastic response to justify its very existence and purpose for being.

Shall we all join forces and look forward to a very enriched program at Sunset for all phases of cultural endeavor?

I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the overwhelming support to the many fine friends and acquaintances since my arrival here last January.

Sincerely,
Dorothy Bowman

Dear Sir:

I am writing again (as I did a year ago) to express my views on the subject of the post offices permitting their premises to be used for what I can only call the subversive function of selling UNICEF cards. I had understood that this matter had been settled.

It has been pointed out many times that these cards are practically always designed by artists who are either Communists or Communist sympathizers, and are not intended to commemorate the birth of Christ.

Also the dishonesty of pretending that UNICEF funds are used only for the welfare of children is too despicable to merit comment. The $80 million project to construct more facilities in New York for the benefit of the characters who are imported for the purpose of expanding the spying activities of the Communist countries (all with diplomatic immunity) will, I understand, be funded in part with $15 million from the UN Development Program and UNICEF.

If the facts put forth in The Truth About UNICEF, by William E. Dunham have not been made abundantly clear by now it must be because you have failed to read it. I am sure you have received hundreds of copies. The Post Office Department could perform no more useful function than to distribute this pamphlet to all post office patrons. I am sure there are many local Americans who have not had the opportunity to get the truth, and would resent, as I do, the sale of these cards if they knew the facts.

Sincerely,
Marian W. Thomas

Dear Editor:

I am a visitor from South Africa passing through Carmel. I have heard that a contingent of South Africans left their country after the Anglo Boer War and settled here. They were of Dutch extraction, and the year they left was 1903. Should anyone have any information of knowledge of this group please contact the Pine Cone. I am interested in this for historical purposes.

Yours sincerely,

DURING CARMEL'S earliest history, some people smilishly dubbed it a town of "long-haired men and short-haired women," in pre-World War I when women almost never cut their hair short and men almost always did. Except this little cluster of individualistic, art-minded Bohemians.

In the first years after World War II, when Carmel had become far more widely known and population growth greatly speeded up, there was a snickering piece of advice some older residents gave newcomers: "First thing to do is get a book on How to Tell the Boys from the Girls." This was a smirking pre-hippie reference to a certain type of non-standard personality that is often attracted to an art-minded community.

Then came the flotsam left after a one-of-a-kind rock festival held in Monterey several years ago. Their sexless dress, their long hair, beads, earrings, handbags, boots, headgear—some townspeople express confusion.

But a Carmel man has come up with a surefire test. "There are two things a girl can't grow—a beard and a mustache," he points out, "and two other things a man can't grow."

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLLO

I was pleased at the last Council meeting in which we discussed the problem of noise at the Youth Center to find that communication with youth has its merits. They presented their views in a fine manner and I feel that progress was made in closing the generation gap. Both sides of the issue were presented and the discussion that followed helped in arriving at a possible solution.

A committee of Councilmen Falge and Anderson together with Mr. Meheen of the Youth Center have met to discuss the installing of an air conditioner which I am certain will help solve the problem. A joint venture agreement I am sure will ensue. I would like to re-affirm my remarks of the other evening that the Council as a whole is solidly behind our youth and we are willing to do our part in furthering better understanding among all concerned.

Due to City ordinances, the appeal from the decision of the Planning Commission regarding the Mobil Oil Company request for a gas station at 5th and Junipero had to be delayed. This hearing was set for Oct. 7. However, due to vacations on the part of Councilmen Whittlesey and Brown, this hearing will have to be continued to the regular meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 8 p.m. All those interested in this matter may present their views at that time.

This week a joint committee of the Council, Planning Commission, Cultural Commission and Library Board met to be presented with the proposed plans of the Library at Sunset. Financing, use of structure, ultimate goals of existing structures and other matters were discussed. Next week's letter will be more explicit with reference to this project.

I was pleased to hear that Mrs. Harlan Ware has accepted the position of director of the Carmel Foundation. Her sincere interest in people and Carmel will open many new doors to functions at this fine institution. Welcome Ruth—and good wishes.

I was equally happy to hear that Mrs. Bowman has accepted the position of Program and Publicity Director at Sunset. It is my hope that the total picture of Sunset will blossom forth this year. I feel the whole Commission is a dedicated group and with Mrs. Renk at the helm, I am certain things will happen.

Just a reminder—jot down the date of September 27—Sunday and remember to be at the Beach to either build or observe the great work at the Sand Castle Contest.

Hearing on gas station delayed until November

NO GAS STATION HERE YET: Heavily wooded southwest corner of Junipero and Fifth, which would become site of new Mobil gas station. A determined group of Carmel residents blocked approval of the oil company's application by appealing the planning commission's decision to the City Council. Petitions with more than 100 signatures were presented at last week's council meeting. The Council set a date for a public hearing on the matter for its next (October) meeting. This was later delayed until the council's November meeting because two councilmen will be absent.

Carmel's unique charms cause problems for Fire Dept.

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Last Thursday the Carmel Fire Department set fire to a condemned house on Mission and 4th for their regular semi-monthly drill. Between 300 and 400 people assembled to watch this rare performance, and according to Fire Chief Bob Updike, they were very orderly and cooperative.

The opportunity to burn a house for fire fighting practice is a real plum for the Fire Department; each year they sadly refuse a number of such houses because they are too close to trees and represent too much of a risk. But the house they are burning on Mission and 4th is clear of impeding greenery and the Fire Department will burn it, room by room, for some time to come.

The Carmel Fire Department dates back to 1916 when it succeeded Carmel's first fire protection at Camp Pendleton!

"After four years, I came back to Carmel and I've never had any desire to go anywhere else," he says. The Marines took care of any budding wanderlust he might have had.

Membership in the fire department then, as now, was open to "any resident of Carmel of good character and standing" and it was his duty to "respond promptly to all alarms and assemble at once at the engine house"—located where the Cork 'n' Bottle stands today.

In 1923 Carmel purchased its first motor driven fire engine, a $5,100 LuVerne that is presently being restored by the department. In 1930 it purchased another vehicle built by Mack Trucks which is still rated a reserve engine and is garaged at the home of Chief Updike until the city finds another place for it. Two more fire engines were eventually acquired.

After eight years as a volunteer fireman and assistant chief, Bob Updike became Fire Chief of Carmel in January of this year. Practically a native, Bob was born in Lusk, Wyo., and came to Carmel when he was 10 years old. He attended Sunset and Junipero Serra Schools and played varsity football for Carmel High and MPC.

In 1955, Bob enlisted in the Marine Corps "to see the world." He probably holds a record unique to any branch of the service: 43 months spent in the same barracks

As head of the Fire Department, Bob works with seven salaried city employees and 20 volunteer fire fighters. The Department is composed of a chief, assistant chief and fire prevention officer, a captain who is in charge of all training, four engineers who drive and operate the pumper and a secretary-dispatcher who receives all alarms and calls.

In addition to fire prevention and protection, the department handles medical emergency calls and operates a Red Cross ambulance which is parked at the station.

How does a volunteer fire department work?

When an alarm is received, the air horn atop the fire station is blown once. Then the big siren is sounded. All volunteers have a tone receiver with a five-mile range in their home; since volunteers must live in the city or in incorporated territory within three miles of the city limits or work in the city, these tone receivers work very well. All volunteers must report directly to the fire station whenever there is an alarm. They keep their boots and turnout pants at home, but must come to the station for their coats and helmets.

VOLUNTEERS

While there's no immediate shortage of volunteers, Chief Updike says there "are never enough." The legal limit to the volunteers is 55 men, a number the Carmel Fire Department has never achieved.

"One of our biggest problems now is that all our paid men were once volunteers. We promote from within whenever there's an opening. Consequently, we deplete the ranks of our volunteers.

"Our rules require that anyone joining the volunteers be 19 years of age," he continues. "We're now revising our By-Laws to allow us to take young men under 19 who have taken or are taking Fire Science at Carmel High School. We hope to bring it up before the City Council very soon. The Council must approve any amendments to our By-Laws."

The Volunteer Fire Department is actually a working social club. At the Fire House they have a club room upstairs, pleasantly furnished with such amenities as color TV, a billiard table and a complete kitchen. The volunteers are currently building a deck outside the upstairs windows for barbecues and parties.

For the record, volunteers work on a point system. They receive two points per fire call and each point averages about $1, so that they receive about $2 per call. This isn't pay—it's called a clothing allowance.

Requirements for joining the volunteers include a one year residency requirement, 19 years of age and under 55 years and entry into a three month probationary period. During the three months, probationary members receive an intensive in-doctrine course and must attend all six regularly scheduled Thursday evening drills. Then they take a final exam covering all aspects of their training and are finally voted on by the volunteer force.

There are no dues, but everyone puts $2 a month into a Booster's Fund which goes toward the annual Christmas Party.

Chief Updike attributes his biggest fire fighting problem to one of Carmel's unique charms—no street addresses.

"If you can't see flames or smoke it takes a while to find the place," he says. "There's more of a problem at night, of course, especially with our emergency ambulance calls. People call in at 2 or 3 a.m. and say they'll keep their porch light burning. When we get to the street, it seems that everyone leaves his porch light on all night in Carmel!"

Carmel

is Carmel's forest, which surrounds the city as well as intermixing with it.

"The faster we can get to a fire, the better. If the pine trees start burning and topping, we know we won't be able to stop it."

"It's getting harder and harder for our volunteers to get into the station. It now takes between five and seven minutes for some to arrive, especially on weekends with all the tourist traffic."

"But we have very good relations with the police. Volunteers sometimes have to practically abandon their cars; they can't waste time looking for a legal parking space. Each volunteer's car has a Fire Department plaque and the police know why the car may be double parked on Mission."

The fire department averages about 300 calls a year, and about 15 alarms a month are what it calls "gas washes." This phenomenon occurs when a car with a full gas tank is parked on an incline. Gas overflows and creates a fire hazard; any casually tossed cigarette could ignite it. So the department goes out and hoses down the street to prevent a fire.

Another cause of fires attributable to local life styles is the burning of pine logs in home fireplaces. Pine creates soot with a high resin content. If the chimneys are not cleaned at least once a year, the accumulated soot will eventually ignite. "You can hear those fires roar," says the chief. "They shoot flames 20 to 30 feet in the air." Naturally, Chief Updike recommends chimney cleaning annually.

But another Carmel characteristic helps prevent fires. Under its intermittent blanket of fog, Carmel remains pleasantly moist—from a fireman's point of view, at least. "The fog's a real help. The houses and shrubs and trees remain moist; we don't get the tinder-like dryness that's so dangerous in fog-free areas," says Updike.

In spite of the fog, there are several buildings in Carmel that cause the crewcut chief to worry.

"Our biggest worry is Sunset Center," he says. "We have more than adequate equipment for anything in Carmel except a few big old buildings. Sunset, ENGINE NUMBER 1: Carmel's first fire truck, purchased in 1923. It is presently being lovingly restored by firemen.

with its high roof, would be more than we could handle without outside help."

By outside help he means the fire departments of Monterey and Pacific Grove who own an aerial ladder and a 65 foot "snorkle"—an extension arm with a bucket similar to those used by the telephone company. Carmel's fire department has a mutual aid agreement with the other Peninsula departments who could respond to a call from Carmel within five to ten minutes.

Nevertheless, a volunteer fireman is on "fire watch" at every Sunset performance, checking primarily backstage and in dressing rooms for observance of the no smoking rules. "We have one volunteer who's been with us for 35 years and he always goes to Sunset performances unless he's out of town. The rest of our men aren't too keen on attending most of the Sunset performances. They're just not Bach Festival types."

Although no one slid down the pole in the firehouse while we were there, a medical emergency call came in. We watched the men go into action and suffered while one attempted to start up the Red Cross ambulance.

Chief Updike remained calm. "It's a Cadillac," he said confidently. "It just depends on how you start it—but it will start."

It did. We said good-bye, climbed into our car and followed the ambulance at a legal speed. By the time we reached the Camino Real and 12th Street location, we could hear its siren wailing on its way to Community Hospital. A policeman assured us it was on its way. A very few minutes had elapsed.

Bob Updike, who is 37 years old, hopes to retire from his position. We got a glimpse of what he means when he says, "everything you do is something new."

Proposed law on cleaning deposits to have little effect here

A proposed state bill that specifies conditions for the return of rent deposits is not expected to affect Carmel rent contracts, a local official for the California Real Estate Agents (CREA) said Friday.

The bill provides that a landlord may claim "...only such amounts as are reasonably necessary to remedy tenant default in payment of rent, to repair damages caused by tenant or to clean the premises upon termination."

It further provides that the retainer be returned to the tenant within two weeks, prescribes a procedure to be followed in handling deposits if the landlord sells the building and arranges for punitive damages in the case of "bad faith" violations.

"We have heard of no great amount of breaches of faith over the years here—at least among real estate agents," said Charles W. McEwen, CREA regional vice president and partner in Catlin-McEwen Realtors of Carmel.

"Some people may get excited over the bill but nobody in the real estate business here," he continued. "I think it's a good law myself."

CREA favors the bill.

McEwen didn't expect the bill will force any changes in the terms or use of typical rent contracts currently in use.

He suspected that the bill

INFLATION STRIKES!

Inflation has hit Carmel—but not so hard as first appeared, at least in the matter of travel expense.

City Council last week approved an increase in reimbursement rates for travel by city employees in private vehicles.

The council wanted to pay the same as the state, but no one was sure whether that rate was 14.5 or 15 cents per mile.

So they instructed Ralph Cowan, assistant city administrator, to find out.

It's 12 cents—two cents more than the present rate—Ralph discovered, so that's what the new rate will be.

Also approved was a per diem advance of $30 per day for lodging and meals and reimbursement for actual cost of transportation by a common carrier.

There's one catch: "That upon completion of the travel, the officer or employee may submit a statement of actual expenses incurred..."

is aimed at big city slumlords and landlords who exploit college students.

The House bill, A.B. 1189, was introduced by San Francisco Representative Willie Brown.

It awaits Governor Ronald Reagan's signature.

Padres' 140-pound defensive ends face Alisal's 220-pounders Friday

"They'll be brutal," is Carmel High School football coach Jason Harbert's description of his team's first regular season opponent, Alisal.

Carmel High's junior varsity and varsity teams travel to the Salinas High School field for games Saturday at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m., respectively.

The games were originally scheduled for Friday until Alisal, which doesn't have a field, learned the Salinas High field was booked by another school for Friday.

The Carmel High Padres have been working especially on defense this week in preparation for Alisal's strong running backs, Harbert said Tuesday.

Alisal, which handed Carmel one of their five defeats last year, has two 220-pound running backs who are especially deadly on power sweeps.

Carmel's defensive ends, David Eagling and Greg Korver, who will be directly in the path of the sweeps, each weigh 140 pounds.

Harbert said he might be forced to stuff the breach with offensive ends Hans Smith, 175 pounds, "a good tough kid," and 170-pound linebacker, Raleigh Brown.

Carmel's offensive line is also outweighed with guards Jim Arnn, Buck Patton and Chuck Davies, each weighing about 150 pounds, going against 220-pound opponents.

Harbert hopes his quick running backs, Mark Balangee, Jerry Argust and Joe Carter, along with fullback Jimmy DeAmaral, will provide a solution.

"I hope we'll be able to spring them every now and then," he said.

Harbert said the team as a whole "is coming along about right."

"We're smoothing it out a little more," he said after ruing Carmel's several fumbles Friday at the Pacific Grove Jamboree.

The Padres with 28 points finished second to Pacific Grove, with 33, and ahead of Marello, with 14.

Harbert was pleased with DeAmaral's "hard running," tackle Steve Hiaasen's blocking and tackle Rick Bowan's tackling.

"They never did make anything through him," he said of Bowan's work.

Carmel plays its second non-league game next week against Woodrow Wilson at home before beginning league competition the following week against Palma in Salinas.

New lockers for Carmel HS expected in Oct.

Carmel High School freshmen who face the frustration of pawing through a schoolmate's gear to reach their own school locker contents will be glad to hear that 270 new lockers are on the way.

Lyon Metal Products Company of Burlingame, who submitted a low bid of $3,872 for the lockers, is expected to begin installation in late October.

Plans revealed for new city library

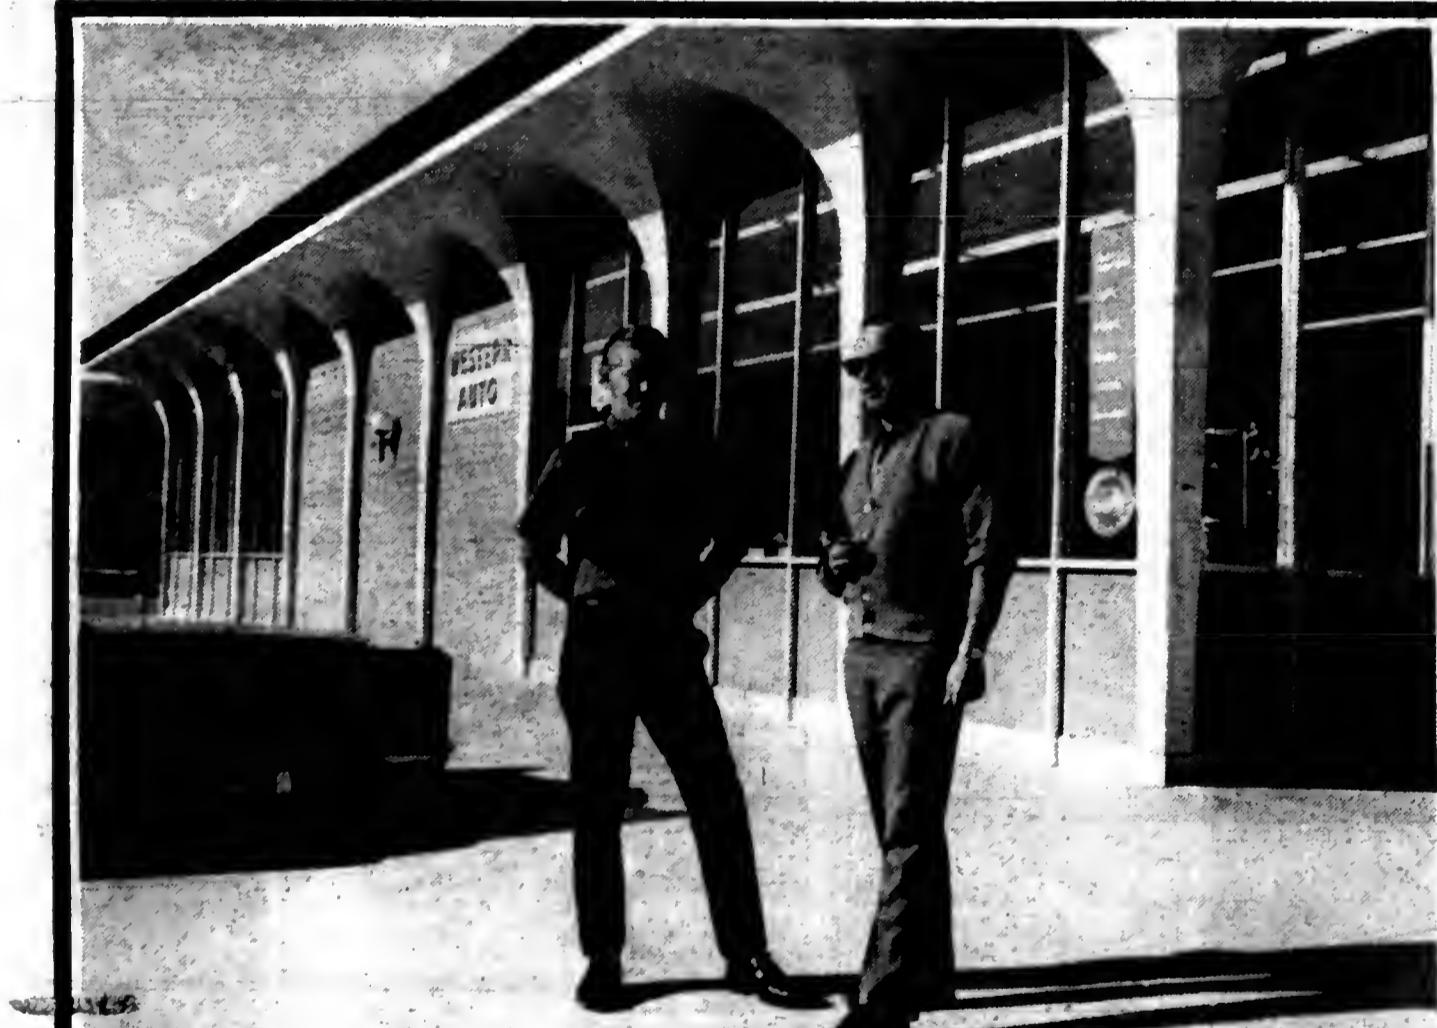

Plans for the proposed library at Sunset Center were shown publicly for the first time last night to a joint committee of City Council, Planning and Cultural Commissions and Library Board. The plans were presented by project ar-

Proposed law on truck parking runs into unexpected opposition

What belongs on the side of the road is a question twice scrutinized by City Council last week.

The council first agreed to a code that requires a permit for temporary encroachments in street or sidewalk areas.

Encroachments are such acts as stacking a pile of lumber on the sidewalk, roping off a construction area or blocking traffic with a generator.

Passenger and cargo vehicle violations are covered by existing state and city vehicle codes.

Written applications for permits must be submitted to the Superintendent of Public Works.

The council next dealt with the long-standing question of overnight parking of trucks in residential areas.

The immediate matter originated at an earlier meeting when an ordinance was proposed to make illegal unpermitted truck parking in front of a home if other parking space is available.

Councilman Frank Falge, who backed the measure, said Tuesday impetus for the motion came with the receipt of two petitions complaining about trucks parked near homes.

One petition, dated July 15, was sent to the council by Carvel Baldwin and contained the signatures of 21 residents of the Twelfth and Camino Real area; the other, dated July 16, was a letter to the council from Phyllis Howard of the Eighth and Torres area.

The proposal ran into flak from Councilman Eben Whittlesey at the July council meeting. Among other things, Whittlesey objected to an ordinance that would prohibit a workingman from taking home a small truck.

The proposal was set aside Thursday.

In its place, Councilman Ken Brown suggested, and the council agreed, that an ordinance be prepared which would apply only to vehicles with dual rear wheels. City Administrator Hugh Bayless was directed to draft the ordinance.

Tuesday, there was doubt among some of the principles that the new ordinance will reach council consideration.

Falge, who "personally does not feel the proposal will take care of the problem," suspected that the ordinance will die in committee.

Falge now favors an ordinance that would impose time limits on trucks parked at night.

Bayless said Tuesday he also expects the current proposal to die before it reaches the council's next meeting in October.

The administrator felt that council disagreement over the issue reflected a difference in opinion over the seriousness of the problem.

Rear Admiral (ret.) C. W. Fisher, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, said Tuesday the citizens' committee favors an ordinance stricter than those proposed so far.

The committee feels that no trucks should be allowed to park in residential areas overnight if they are used for business, he said.

Garbage collection franchise to be open for bids Nov. 16

Bids for Carmel's garbage collection franchise will be opened November 16.

The bid can be awarded "any time after that" although the city will allow liberal time for study, City Administrator Hugh Bayless said this week.

The contract currently owned by the John Roscelli Corp. of Carmel expires May next year.

George Roscelli and his partner, Elio Chiappe, pay $3,500 a year for the 10-year franchise.

The Roscelli Corp. has handled Carmel garbage for 45 years.

Elio Chiappe said this week he and Roscelli will definitely submit a bid.

The corporation's stake in the franchise was recently increased with the acquisition of two new trucks worth a combined price of more than $37,000.

Roscelli operates two additional trucks in its service.

CONSTITUTION

(or Citizenship Day)

THE 17th SEPTEMBER

MIRACLE AT PHILADELPHIA

By C. A. DeCamp

If ever the "Glorious Ensign of the Republic, its arms and trophies streaming forth in all their original luster" should grace the homes of all of those to whom America is dear, it should be on the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, acknowledging as it did, the oneness of a people devoted to Liberty and to its extension across a new continent.

Yet, in the minds of many of that time (1787), sovereign and independent of each other, the states had fought thru six years of war and had won. Why win a war for independence from one government, only to be taxed by another powerful government?

Actually, the Country was even more divided then than now. Yet the true patriots of that time, determined on the future union of the whole, "brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty" and dedicated to the equality of mankind in the language: "We the people, in order to form a more perfect union...and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America."

An act of which George Washington wrote Lafayette that: "It appears to me then little short of a miracle, that the Delegates from so many different States should unite in forming a system of government so little liable to well founded objections."

An act which a later President, Hoover, wrote: "Thus our American Republic was the first of the modern nations to place into the structure of government the whole social philosophy of liberty, with its care for the worth and integrity of the individual, with its security of unalienable human rights...Our fathers died willingly that we might come into this, the most stupendous inheritance men could bequeath to a race."

Later to admonish: "A nation is strong or weak, it thrives or perishes upon what it believes to be true. If our youth are rightly instructed in the faith or our fathers; in the tradition of our country; in the dignity of each individual man, then our power will be stronger than any weapon of destruction that man can devise."

I ask: can there be one among us so lacking in gratitude and veneration as to fail to fly our flag proudly and prominently over his premises on the 17th of September?

Dedicated to the V.W.W.-I.

A spectacular exhibition of works by more than 40 outstanding photographers opens Saturday at Sunset Center for a four-week run under the auspices of the Friends of Photography.

Included in the collection, assembled by Ansel Adams over the last 40 years, are works of historical interest, including four early daguerreotypes and several prints by Civil War photographer Matthew Brady.

Among the photographers represented are Arnold Genthe, whose photos of the San Francisco earthquake electrified the world; Brady, who is represented with portraits of General Robert E. Lee and Walt Whitman and Civil War scenes; Edward and Brett Weston, famed Carmel area photographers; Wynn Bullock, Clarence Kennedy, Imogene Cunningham, Roger Sturtevant, Paul Strand, Vilem Kris, Minor White, Paul Caponigro and Ruth Bernhard.

The works are almost a survey of every important period in the world of photography. In addition to the historical interest, there are still-lifes, portraits and landscapes, many of which have never been viewed locally.

Adams has loaned parts of this collection to museums in all parts of the country for major exhibitions. Commenting on the scope of the exhibit, Adams says, "I have selected from my collection prints which say something about the communicative power of photography. Many of the photographers represented are very well known; others are lesser known and some are perhaps forgotten but their images survive...because of their enduring qualities..."

The prints from the original Matthew Brady Group were made by Adams from the Ben Wittick negatives made for special exhibits at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. He also made prints from the Genthe negatives, approved by Dr. Genthe, for another Museum of Modern Art exhibit.

The exhibit may be viewed through Oct. 25 at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, 1-5 p.m. daily. It is closed Mondays. Admission is free.

Carmel624-2765*The conscience of Carmel*'Herbert Heron Year'

By GUNNAR NORBERG

JUST WHAT SHOULD THE CITY DO about Sunset Center? It is being bought through a bond issue which was overwhelmingly approved by Carmel voters six years ago. And what use did those voters see for Sunset? Municipal use. Community use. Cultural use. What's happened? A special zoning ordinance, which took effect two years ago, provided for all those uses, but only one—the cultural use—has been emphasized.

Why? And what's the result?

The City lost money. It took in $20,611.00 in the 1969-70 fiscal year, and it spent $38,926.00 for operations and maintenance—not to mention an extra $35,465.00 which was spent under the heading 'Sunset enhancement.' So—in just one fiscal year—the City spent over three-and-a-half dollars for every dollar it took in via the rental route.

If the City lost financially, did the people of Carmel gain? And if they didn't, who did?

August is generally the busiest month in Carmel—with tens of thousands of daytime beach-goers and shop lookers, as well as full-every-night motels. Sometimes it has been thought that Sunset is operated as a kind of tourist attraction—though not by the voters who thought they were approving its purchase for the three uses mentioned—municipal, community, cultural. Sometimes it has been thought that Sunset playgrounds would provide needed parking when overflow thousands jam the City—as is often the case in August.

LET'S LOOK AT SUNSET on a busy day in August. The day I looked was a Saturday. Near noon. A sunny morning. The date was August 22nd.

Let's see now what was going on. One of the bungalows at the south end of the two-block Sunset site, is dedicated to Girl Scout use, and it was locked up. Another bungalow is used by the Carmel school system, as is also the pottery building nearby. Both were closed, as well all schools late in August. Adult school classes in the arts and crafts are set up by the public school system, if as many as 15 wish to have them.

What about the big main building at Sunset? All the rented rooms and offices were closed—except one, where some four or five yoga devotees were slowly doing stretching exercises. Nothing was going on in the Sunset auditorium—but a downstairs Mission street exit door was ajar, giving access to the auditorium and all the rooms south of it. I reported this to the police, and also that the principal access doors to much of the north end of the main building were also open.

AND WHAT ABOUT PUBLIC PARKING—on this, one of the busiest traffic days in August? What used to be called the center playground—just opposite the auditorium—had a few parked cars, perhaps six or eight. And what about what used to be known as the big north playground? A thin scattering of cars—perhaps eight or ten—were parked there—just enough to have made it impossible for youngsters to venture to use it as a playground.

One of the big rooms which was securely locked this Saturday in August, was what was long known as the Sunset gymnasium (from which, long ago, the City removed the basketball hoops, and forbade youngsters gymnasium use).

Sunset, of course, is not always in the state of disuse in which I found it that delightfully salubrious day in August. Nevertheless, City officials have sometimes visited Sunset and found it as I did—with offices and studios mostly closed.

Rents there are low—a basic ten-cents-per-square-foot—on the premise that the City benefits in some way from having tenants occupying space assigned, even though, for example, studios being rented may not be open to the public more than a few hours a week, while certain offices—those of the Monterey County Symphony, the Community Theater and the Bach Festival—are not public attractions in any usual sense but only useful to their respective organizations.

But what, you ask, should be done at Sunset? Once a restaurant was suggested. But there were forty of those, some struggling to survive, paying City taxes. Why should the City compete with them? And it eventually didn't. Rooms are rented to individual artists at Sunset—even though there are more commercially-operated artist studios or galleries in Carmel than anywhere else between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Some wonder about the wisdom of this policy. Meanwhile, the City has no museum, though a former city body, the Carmel Arts Commission, once took steps to start one.

CITY OFFICES COULD BE HOUSED in the rooms at Sunset, and City Councils have voted both for and against moving them there, but no actual move has taken place (though one City official was once briefly housed there). A proposal to place the post office at Sunset is being considered by the City and the federal government, but its possible opening there could still be years away. Meanwhile, the City library board is readying plans for a new, and much larger library at Sunset, though many Carmelites are still in no frame of mind to give up use of the present library, which was a gift to the City and is considered an architectural masterpiece of the late Bernard Maybeck.

Getting away, for a moment, from the various "if-as-and-when" uses to which Sunset Center may sometime be put, let's see just how the people of the City of Carmel, and their guests, could get some simple, genuine, desired use out of it. And just by using money regularly being appropriated for it.

Three years ago, when I was a member of the City Council, I proposed that the Council give me a free hand in running Sunset for a year, using appropriate funds and regularly assigned personnel, but without any pay for me. I suggested the period be called the "Herbert Heron Year" for Heron, since deceased, symbolized in his person and accomplishments, the essential character and essence of the original Carmel. The Council rejected my proposal—even though, just the year before, I had won both Council and community approval for heading the City's 50th Anniversary celebration.

And what would I have done? What, in fact, could still be done?

I WOULD HAVE USED THE OFFERED cooperation of the school system, which then—through its recreation department and adult school—could have provided an organized program for use of both the gymnasium and the north playground, if the City officially had asked for school cooperation, and could have provided any reasonable adult educational activity which sufficient numbers might actively have sought and supported. (This could have included joint city-school support for drama programs, which have had such sponsorship in years past).

I would have organized a local town hall program, presenting talks and forum discussions concerning locally moot problems and questions, such as have taken place here in times past. (I was once much the youngest member, some 20 years ago, of an august Carmel Town Hall whose other directors were Talbert Josselyn, Frederick Bechdolt, Ida Newberry, and Heron himself—all now gone).

I would have organized dinners, dances, other social affairs, as often as I would have found local people or organizations interested in such activities. (I would have used the presently unused cafeteria and kitchen at Sunset, for these affairs).

WHO WOULD I HAVE FOUND to help me with all this? Just before I was designated to head Carmel's 50th Anniversary celebration (which I had to put together in just over a month)—I was asked that same question. Eventually the City sent out engraved certificates of appreciation to more than 200 local people who, at my solicitation, had played key roles in making Carmel's 50th Anniversary celebration a success.

All of these possibilities for the use of Sunset—to benefit specifically people who live in Carmel and their visitors and guests—still could be realized. All that is needed is for the City Council and its commissions, to want to see them done. And if they were done, wouldn't we all enjoy it? Of course we would.

THE PERFORMANCE

The featured premier presentation of Hungarian Week in connection with the Old Monterey Bicentennial was the piano recital Friday night by Istvan Nadas, Hungarian-born virtuoso. He is well known in this area, because of his previous involvement in the Bach Festival and with MPC. At present, he is in residence at Washington State University.

The concert consisted of a program mainly of Liszt with an added piece by Bela Bartok.

The first work performed was the Legend No. 2, subtitled "St. Francis of Paola Walking on the Waves," by Liszt. This work is the usual Liszt flamboyance requiring a deep concentration and intense involvement on the part of the performer for its execution, all of which Dr. Nadas displayed.

This work incidentally recalls that other Liszt who was finally to turn his back on the brilliant world of virtuoso triumphs and enter the church in minor orders. In this composition, the miracle of the Saint who defies the fury of the waters and summons up faith to walk on the waves is enacted in music with all the force of Liszt's mystic interpretation could muster.

Dr. Nadas was in complete accordance with the Lisztian interpretation.

The second work, the Liszt Sonata in B minor, many years ago was the "warhorse" of such artists as Vladimir Horowitz, Alfred Cortot, and Artur Rubinstein. It is a large work, divided into a number of parts played without interruption, and it was dedicated by Liszt to his friend Robert Schumann.

It is constructed on a principal theme, which serves as a pivot, composed of two distinct elements, which recur under many aspects during the course of the development, and of three motifs, more static, but the importance of which is not less than the opening movement, largo assai.

One hears the first motif, pianissimo, then suddenly, in tempo allegro energico, appears the principal theme. The development continues further to the andante sostenuto, which presents a fervent exultation, almost religious in character.

Following the andante, the two elements of the initial theme reappear in another allegro energico, followed in quick succession by the prestissimo, the andante sostenuto, allegro moderato, and ending up with a lento assai.

This is a tremendously complex and involved composition, demanding extreme concentration and absorption on the part of the virtuoso performer, as well as extraordinary virtuosity and immense technique. Dr. Nadas displayed all these elements in the performance of this work in a brilliant manner.

His glissandi and rubati were very well enunciated which were reinforced by the calculated and proper use of the pedal. One cannot quibble with any part of the performance in its main aspects. However, smaller works and more ingratiating ones, such as, for example, some of the Paganini Etudes, the Etudes de Concert, as well as some parts of the L'Annees de Pelerinage, could have served to a better purpose.

After the short intermission, the concert resumed with a performance of the Liszt Ballade in B minor, which came through under the fingers of Dr. Nadas as a lovely, controlled presentation of much lyrical aspect and pleasing intonation.

The Bela Bartok Suite for Piano, Op. 14 which followed is one of this composer's most perfectly written and best-loved piano works. Its sequence of four short movements rather suggests a sonatina, the only slow movement oddly coming at the end. It was most beautifully performed by Dr. Nadas in a very well articulated intonation.

The last piece performed was the Liszt Spanish Rhapsodie, which Dr. Nadas explained was presented because of the Spanish influence prevalent on this Peninsula. It is a real show piece with crashing fortissimi and lovely controlled pianissimi. The tonal coloration was brought out exceedingly well, in a brilliant performance.

However, one point must be made. Inasmuch as this concert was in honor of Hungarian Week, it seems that some of the very beautifully ingratiating compositions of both Liszt and Bartok based on Hungarian folk tunes could very well have been included.

THE RECORDINGS

The only recording presently available of the Liszt Legend No. 2 is a dazzling interpretation by Gyorgy Cziffra on Philips World Series (PHC-9005). There is also an imported Hungarian recording by Wehner on Qualiton 1118.

Of course, the domestic recording is to be preferred, because of interpretation, performance and smoothness of surfaces, as well as reasonable price.

The Liszt Sonata in B

minor has been recorded at least eight times domestically, as well as five times on imported discs, particularly of Hungarian origin. Nevertheless, at the top of the list stands the unforgettable performance and projection by Vladimir Horowitz recorded in 1932 by French Pathé on Great Recordings of the Century (COLH-72), and a non-descript copy of same on Seraphim 60114.

Next in order, is the splendid performance by Artur Rubinstein (VIC LSC-2871). The Cortot recording was not available for comparison.

The Liszt Ballade No. 2 is represented by one domestic and one imported Hungarian recording. The Claudio Arrau performance on Philips 802906 is good, while the Wehner on Qualiton 1118 is just adequate. The tonal and surface effects are much better on the Philips recording, and is, therefore, to be preferred.

There are three recordings of the Liszt Spanish Rhapsodie, all on domestic labels, but the only one that can be recommended as to over-all performance and recording is the one by Edith Farnadi on Westminster 2346.

The Bela Bartok Suite for Piano, Op. 14, has been well represented in nine different recordings, six domestic and three imported. Comparing some of these recordings against each other, it seems to this reviewer that the outstanding one in all respects is the one by Gyorgy Sandor (among other Bartok works) in a 3-record set by Vox (SVBX 5427).

What is Christian Science?

It is a religion based on the words and works of Christ Jesus. It has helped many like you to prove in a measure the meaning of Christ Jesus' promise: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." It shows the scientific basis of Christianity and how to avail yourself of the laws of God in everyday life. If you would like to learn more about Christian Science, you are welcome to come to our Reading Room and to read this week's Bible Lesson.

Helen Dooley one-man show opens in Valley tomorrow

PALETTE KNIFE was used to produce "Two for the Show," one of 20 paintings by Helen Dooley on exhibit starting tomorrow. The oil painting, measuring 36-by-40 inches, was created this year.

Helen B. Dooley, who left college teaching six years ago to make a living by painting in Carmel, opens a one-woman show tomorrow at the Carmel Valley Art Annex, Carmel Valley Village.

Her oils, which she identifies with those of expressionism and "new realism" schools, will be displayed through Oct. 4.

Many of the paintings are recent works and most deal with Monterey Peninsula scenes.

Miss Dooley is a gray-haired lady whose reticence fades as she talks about her career.

She says she hesitates to talk about herself because introductions written before her exhibits over the years tend to say the same thing.

Some of the "same things" are the fact that she has exhibited at Lord and Taylor Galleries in New York City and includes among her awards first and third places in a Society of Western Artists contest and one of the three awards for contemporary painting presented at the 1967 Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art competition.

One of the facts that seldom gets into the introduction is that Miss Dooley quit a comfortable job teaching painting and art education at the University of Pacific in Stockton to risk opening still another gallery—the Dooley Gallery at San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth—in Carmel.

Another is that she continues to paint in a non-representational, non-adorable style contrary to much of the work supplying local demands.

She prefers not to mention this for fear of sounding "snobbish."

"Most people don't understand my work," she said this week.

The paintings she does sell are bought mostly by people from New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Miss Dooley paints at home "as much as possible."

She studied with Maurice Stern at the California School of Fine Arts and with Millard Sheets on a fellowship at Claremont College.

"They were the greatest people I could have studied with," she said.

She has a bachelor of arts degree from San Jose State College and a master of arts degree from Claremont.

Thirty works are included in the show.

They are executed with palette knife.

Asked if the knife didn't restrict her ability to delineate a subject, Miss Dooley said she is concerned with more basic aspects of form.

Driver Improvement Classes scheduled that persons who attend the sessions be members of either sponsoring Association—anyone interested in Defensive Driving is welcome.

GOLDEN WEDDING FOR TRACEYS

Col. (U.S.A. Ret.) and Mrs. John C. Tracey, Sr., of Taylor Road, Carmel, were honored on their 50th anniversary at a reception hosted by their children last weekend.

The Traceys were married Sept. 6, 1920 in Kansas City by Harry Clayton Rogers, who later became first minister of the Presbyterian Church in Carmel.

Hosting the party were the Tracey's daughter and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. W.A. Rohlfing of Fresno, and their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Tracey, Jr. of Saratoga.

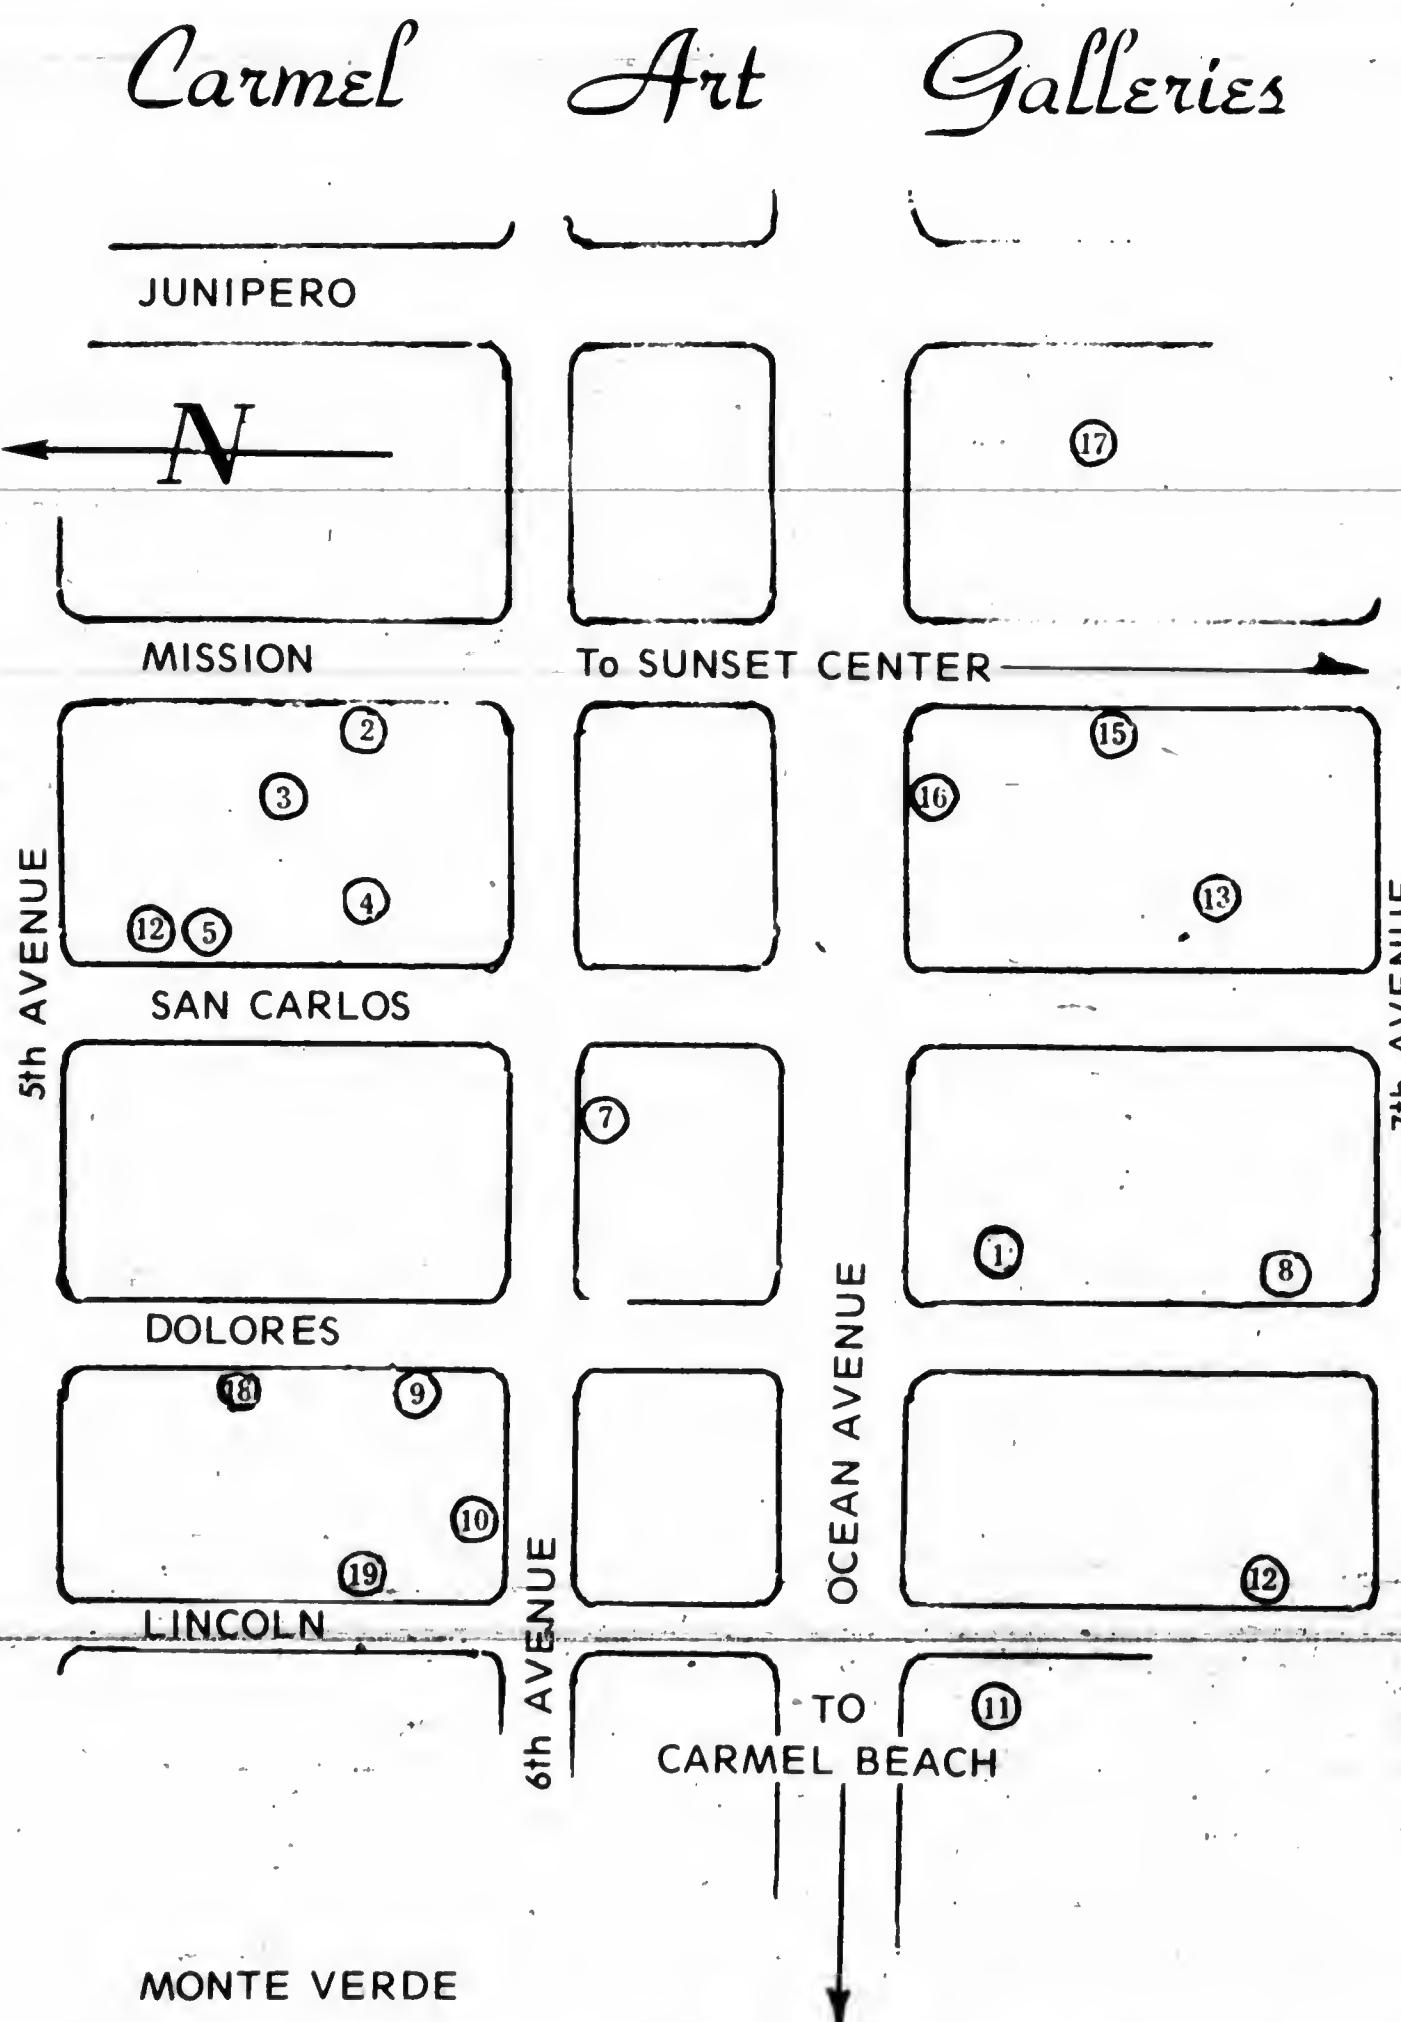

Special guests were Mrs. Tracey's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. R.G. Taylor of Hendersonville, N.C., and her brother, John Boosinger of Kansas City.

Five of the eight Tracey grandchildren were present to add to the celebration.

Restrictive law on film making nears approval

The Carmel City Council Thursday moved a step closer toward banning professional film production without a permit in the city.

The council approved the first reading of an ordinance that will cost a film maker $150 for a permit in the case his application is accepted.

The ordinance establishes inclusive guidelines for the granting of permits which read in part: "The Business License Review Board may deny the application on the basis that granting it would be prejudicial to the public health, safety or welfare, or that it would adversely affect the economic welfare of the business community or the public image of Carmel."

The proposed ordinance will be read a second time at next month's council meeting and, if approved, becomes law.

He is a member of the Carmel Camera Club and Friends of Photography. At present he uses a Leicaflex camera, and most of his photos are 35 mm.

Mrs. Paul Cooper (Jody) became intrigued by her husband's photographs but is interested in different subject matter - people and animals.

She is also a member of the Friends of Photography, and currently uses a Rolleiflex camera. At present she is interested in further study of photographic techniques and in continuing her free lance activities.

Our man in Big Sur

By RAY SIMPSON

The Big Sur Grange Hall squats surrounded by a clutch of second-growth redwood trees next to the Big Sur River. The river looks clear and cold, and on the opposite bank there's a vest-pocket beach of pure white sand.

The river in front of the pristine beach eddies around a boulder and into a pool that's just deep enough for swimming. The boulder looks the right height for diving, and the water on its way to the ocean beckons like a cold temptress, inviting you to dally a while. Mulling the invitation over, you're sad yet relieved you're not sixteen anymore and trying to impress a girl.

To find an old-fashioned-honest-to-god grange hall set right in the middle of America's hippest rural community, a potsmoker's paradise, a hipster's haven that is the fatherland of the far-out set, that is Mecca to millions of disenchanted and dope-jaded kids, a place that their envious parents fantasize about and occasionally visit in their camper trucks—rubber-necking through the Sur like an endless Grey Line tour, swivelling their balding heads frantic for a glimpse of the fabled naked hippies freaking in the forest, and so scared they'll miss a good skin show they drive like senile incompetents—to come upon a town meeting in a grange hall, chartered in 1948 by the Patrons of Husbandry I swear I'm not making it up, located right in the heart of down-canyon Headsville, U.S.A., is to flash on the kind of funky anachronism that is typical of Big Sur.

This is the country of A Devil in Paradise, and last Monday night more than eighty of Henry Miller's former neighbors and one-time friends gathered in the grange hall to exorcise the Devil. The ritual ceremony was a show of support for an establishment drive to outlaw hitchhiking in Big Sur and the rest of Monterey county.

"The Sheriff has told me that there may be many shallow graves of hitchhikers lost in Big Sur forever. And we are not any longer going to be the dope center of the west coast!"

This optimistic incantation was uttered by county supervisor Willard Branson, an astute politician who knows what his audience wants to hear. He also knows that some of his constituents are ready, willing, able and determined to take vigilante action, if necessary, to put an end to the ravages the Big Sur country has suffered in recent years.

Fearful that the drop-out youths who drift through, cut fences, start fires, pollute much of the country is straight up and down—in other words, one hell of a place to put out a wildfire that has more than dilettante aspirations. A bad fire in the Santa Lucias could destroy a quarter of a million acres of watershed, and firemen don't attack a fire like that; they back off, build their lines, wait for the fire to come to them, and pray for rain.

It appears certain that Monterey county is going to have an anti-hitchhiking ordinance, and though curtailment of individual freedoms is particularly repugnant to the people who make their homes in Big Sur—this is not an easy country—the consensus here is in favor of anything that will alleviate the people-pressure.

To a long-haired dissident who complained that the law would cause him personal hardship, Supervisor Branson replied, "The majority, through the democratic process, has taken away your right to hitchhike. And that's too bad. But there's civil rights, and there are property rights. And people whose property is being desecrated have a right to protection. If you don't like it, then register to vote—if you aren't already—and get your friends to register to vote, and then get together and vote me out of office!"

This is pretty straight talk for a politician, and Branson's remarks got an ovation from the audience. It was clear that their patience has been over-taxed, that the threat of fire in the woods, the safety of their cattle, the potability of their drinking water and their own physical safety out-weighed the civil right of a hippie to thumb a ride.

We wondered, when we left, what old Henry Miller would've said had he been there, and we don't really know. We do recall asking an old friend—another writer and a friend of Miller's—why in the world he was moving out of Big Sur, a place where he had been very happy and had spent many years.

"Because," he explained, "the eagles don't live here anymore."

The business scene

Shopping in Carmel

By JAMES PETER COST
President, Carmel Business Assn.

THIS WEEK AS LAST WEEK, some of the information in this column was published in newsletters written earlier this year to members of the Carmel Business Association. Some of it has been up-dated, but the material is essentially the same.

About Christmastime the rumors and the generally accepted consensus was that not only was business down but down as much as 55 percent for the year all over Carmel. I conducted my own limited survey. My questioning took me from shop to shop trying to locate someone, anyone whose business was down. The answers were nearly always the same. Each said his business was up but had heard that business was down in general.

In many cases, people made specific reference to someone whose business they had heard was down. I followed the lead each time and checked out the businesses referred to. In no case did I at that time, find anyone whose business was not either as good as or better than the previous year.

After I sent out my newsletter, several people called and said their business was down from the preceding year. In nearly all cases the callers were motel owners. The maximum decrease was 30 percent but the others reported smaller percentages.

WHILE CONDUCTING MY SURVEY after Christmas, I finally made my way to the city hall where I spent one of the best hours of my life. Not only were the people efficient and cooperative, but friendly. There I looked at figures, graphs, reports and statements; all neat, pure and one-hundred percent free of rumors and emotions. Business was way up for the year. At that time (January) it appeared the percentage of increase promised to break all records. Since then the percentage of increase has fallen off although total business has reached an all-time high according to sales taxable items sold.

The records show that business has been better every year since 1957—the earliest date of the figures shown here. Since then the increase has fluctuated each year and from June '67 to June '68 dropped to almost zero, but business has been up each year. The following figures are based on the amount of sales tax returned to the City by the State each year on a quarterly basis.

AS MOST OF YOU KNOW, sales taxes do not represent total sales for the City since they are not collected on all items sold. The actual gross sales figure would be considerably higher. The amounts below are one-fifth the amounts of the total sales taxes collected for the years the tax has been five percent of the amount of the purchase.

For example, the gross sales tax for fiscal 1969-70 was $1,300,700.00. This represents sales of $26,014,000.00 on taxable items. The amount returned to the city was $260,140.33.

The figure also does not include items normally taxed but tax free if shipped out of California for use or consumption.

YEAR	SALES ON TAXABLE ITEMS	RATE OF INCREASE
57-58	$12,639,700	10.1 (approx.)
58-59	13,916,100	3.0 (approx.)
59-60	14,332,600	9.2 (approx.)
60-61	15,659,500	11.8 (approx.)
61-62	17,408,200	3.30
62-63	17,984,700	9.25
63-64	19,641,500	8.40
64-65	21,286,900	7.46
65-66	22,874,300	5.17
66-67	24,058,000	0.13 (year of Expo.)
67-68	24,090,300	3.03
68-69	24,826,000	4.79
69-70	26,014,000

Many factors could and should be taken into consideration in interpreting the above statistics. The sales tax rate has changed a number of times in the past years. I do not know the exact dates. The percentage of taxes returned to the City from the State may also have changed since the initiation of sales taxes.

INFLATION ACCOUNTS FOR SOME GROWTH in total business but is not reflected accurately in sales tax figures which exclude areas of greatest increase. This could be both better and worse since most of our business is related to sales and most of our expenditures are related to areas of greatest inflationary increases. It would take more time than is worthwhile to determine whether inflation is hurting us or helping us. I have heard both sides of the argument and the answer is highly individual, personal and internal.

In February, after the C.B.A. Newsletter was sent out one of the readers pointed out that if the rate of increase continued to decline it would soon be a decrease if it is not already. The point was well made and the Retail Committee of C.B.A. is studying the problem. Since the letter went out the rate of increase has started upward again and we hope it will continue to climb.

The official sales tax figures show a strong seasonal business pattern. The figures below are rounded off to the nearest thousand. The order of business is always the same within the year.

The quarter ending in March is always the slowest, then the quarter ending in December, then in June. The quarter ending in September is always the highest. The range from low to high is shown.

YEAR	LOW	QUARTER ENDING	HIGH	QUARTER ENDING
1963	$37,000	March	$56,000	Sept.
1964	44,000	March	62,000	Sept.
1965	47,000	March	65,000	Sept.
1966	48,000	March	68,000	Sept.
1967	51,000	March	73,000	Sept.
1968	52,000	March	74,000	Sept.
1969	49,000	March

In 1968 there were 30 new business opened in Carmel. Five businesses did not renew licenses from the year before. That means the total sales for Carmel had to be split into 25 more pieces than the year before, thereby dividing the pie into smaller pieces for some.

SEVERAL BUSINESSMEN POINTED OUT that as business becomes more competitive in Carmel, business techniques become more professional and sophisticated. In order to get a fair share of the business available the otherwise marginal poorly operated businesses must improve service and quality or be forced out.

As service and quality improve, sales will increase. The trend will be toward more efficient management, better business practices, better service, better quality and probably for less money. As the marginal businesses improve or drop out and are replaced by more capable management, total gross for the town will increase, not decrease. The customer will benefit as the shopkeepers benefit.

To get an accurate picture of what is happening to business in Carmel it must be compared not only with other years but with what is happening in other towns and similar business areas. Next week I will have some additional material related to this topic.

In the meantime, remember business in Carmel just reached an all-time high.

Would air conditioning abate noise at Youth Center?

The city is looking into air conditioning as a solution for the Carmel Youth Center noise problem.

The City Council, after listening to conflicting claims about the effect of center dance music on residents in the area, Monday sent two of its members to study the situation.

"We're investigating the feasibility of air conditioning the dance floor area," said Frank Falge, chairman of the council's Lands and Improvement Committee. "Personally, I think air conditioning is the only solution."

Falge, with fellow committee man, Bernard Anderson, met with center representatives, Jack Giles and Michael Meheen. Giles is director and Meheen a member of the board of directors.

The quartet toured the building at Fourth and Torres and examined the notorious windows from which escapes allegedly peace-disturbing rock music.

"You just can't close the windows and cut off air for 300 people," said Falge.

Solving the noise problem with air conditioning would also facilitate greater use of the facilities, Falge said. There could be more dances and later hours.

"Carmel needs this youth center," he said.

The committee man said a "difficult situation" definitely exists in the proximity of the center and Rosita Lodge across the street.

The motel's owner, Robert N. Martin, presented to the City Council Thursday a petition with 11 signatures from residents in the area saying the center's Friday night dance music is too loud.

Center youth members from Carmel High School responded with a petition containing 66 signatures claiming the music does not constitute a disturbance.

"I think the tour helped a couple of councilmen understand better what the youth center is and what it's doing," said Meheen, a Monterey lawyer who is secretary of the center's board of officers.

However, Meheen is not convinced of the need for air conditioning.

"I personally think it's sort of a waste of money," he said.

Meheen said that money spent on air conditioning could be better spent on new floors and general building improvements.

The director said he feels the noise problem is the creation of a number of people of a far smaller proportion than those who feel the music is fine as it is.

"Nothing was proved at the council meeting—except that the kids went out and got 66 signatures supporting them," he said.

Meheen said the center has already tried to mollify its detractors on four occasions by installing double door and air recirculation systems, by reducing the number of dances to once a week and by ending the dances at 11:30 p.m.

Falge said the committee's next steps are to develop specifications, get cost estimates and determine finance sources.

The project would be funded preferably as a cooperative venture between the city and center, he said.

Break ground for new bus garage

Granite Construction Company of Monterey broke ground Friday for the Carmel Unified School District's new $121,513 bus garage.

Bids were awarded last Wednesday to three local Peninsula companies to build the facilities on the southeast corner of Middle School off Carmel Valley Road.

The bid for general building and grounds for $98,900 went to Geyer Construction Company of Monterey; for the electrical distribution system, $6,363 to Collins Electrical Company of Monterey; for service station equipment, $16,250 to Service Station Equipment Company of Salinas.

Granite Construction is a sub-contractor preparing the site.

The garage will provide mechanical service for the district's entire 17-bus fleet, according to Walter Hinton, district business manager.

The garage is expected to become operational by January 1, Hinton said.

The project is being paid for out of district general funds.

The new garage replaces one currently located behind Carmel High School.

Citing the disadvantages of the present garage, Hinton said it draws pedestrian traffic and creates inefficient work patterns because of its layout.

For instance, on occasion six busses must be moved to gain access to a stricken machine, he said.

Wednesday's bid awards cover the cost of the project except for fencing, which will be bid on in several weeks, said Hinton.

School girls scorn women's lib, opt for homemaking again

Instruction in the domestic arts—halted several years ago because of lack of interest—has reappeared at Carmel High School.

Five classes averaging 25 girls each are studying daily the homely arts.

General purpose classroom No. 2 was remodelled during the summer into a homemaking room including sink, stove, cabinets, cutting and sewing tables, dressing room and mirrors.

The classes stress clothes, budgets and design.

Miss Susan Williams, a graduate of the University of California at Davis, is the new homemaking teacher.

The classroom is also used by adult education classes.

Carmel High Principal Arthur J. Gumbrell attributed the reappearance of the classes to student and public demand.

Symphony anticipates 25th anniversary celebration

Kenneth Ehrman, President of the Symphony, has announced that next week is "Symphony Week!" Monterey County Symphony's 25th anniversary will be celebrated during the week of Sept. 20 to 26 and mayors of all the cities in Monterey County are being asked to proclaim Symphony Week in honor of the event.

Tickets for the Carmel Series will be mailed to holders of season tickets in the sold-out Sunset Auditorium. Orders are being received from the 3000-brochure mailing for the Monterey series. Tickets for the Monterey Peninsula College series of concerts will go out during Symphony week.

The first concert of the season is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 4 at MPC. It is repeated on Monday, Oct. 5 at Carmel and on Tuesday, Oct. 6 in Salinas.

The Symphony Association presents six sets of concerts in the Monterey, Carmel and Salinas series, for a total of 18 concerts, featuring soloists of international renown.

Other events for the 1970-71 season include the Symphony's participation in the Bicentennial celebration in Carmel, Oct. 17th, when the full orchestra, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, and the Sacramento Chorale, will perform Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" under the baton of Haymo Taeuber.

On Feb. 6, two concerts for youth will be presented in Monterey and in Salinas by the Symphony Orchestra. The Junior League takes care of bringing the children by bus to these concerts.

Another of the services which the Symphony Association provides for the county is the funding of the Youth Orchestra. Trained by the Symphony Conductor, Haymo Taeuber, talented young musicians receive valuable experience in performing with the best young musicians in the area. A tour in which the Youth Orchestra plays concerts in schools from Salinas to King City, culminates the season.

The symphony provides an opportunity for qualified musicians from all walks of life to perform major symphonic works under a conductor with wide experience. Considering that each concert is presented three times, at least 2,000 listeners are given pleasure in each set of the concert series. Broadcasts of each concert reach the entire county.

The Governing Board of the Symphony Association has the task of obtaining funds to cover these activities. The budget of $80,000 must be raised each season. Ticket sales account for approximately one-third of the amount.

Two-thirds must be funded by project events or by contributions to the "Chair" program or by special gifts.

The Symphony Guilds, led by Mrs. Thomas Avery Roper on the Peninsula and Mrs. Hal Schmechel in Salinas, are auxiliaries of the Symphony Association. The Peninsula Guild has planned five preview teas for the season, plus several fund-raising events such as the Domino Tournament at Del Monte Lodge, Nov. 14, the Symphony d'Elegance in March, the "Pops" Concert in April and the Annual Luncheon in May. From these events, the Guild raises the largest share of gifts in support of the Symphony.

To reach individual contributors, an invitation to participate in Symphony financing will soon be mailed. It will list the categories of the "Chair" program, from $500 for the Conductor to $100 for a Musician's Chair. A special classification of "Grandee" is listed for the $1000 donor.

Contributions to the non-profit Symphony Association are tax-deductible and may be mailed to Box 3965, Carmel 93921.

'The Women' at Studio Theatre features an all-female cast

An all-female cast of the Clare Boothe Luce comedy "The Women," opening Friday at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant, draws on well-known local actresses for its leading roles.

Margaret Heater (Mary), Anita Tonn (Sylvia), Jean McBride (Edith) and Betty Hughes (Nancy) all had extensive stage experience before moving to the Monterey Peninsula and have since been prominent in Studio or Circle productions.

Susanne H. Howard (Peggy) comes to "The Women" from a part in "Annie Get Your Gun", while Louise Oberbeck (Mrs. Morehead) is a First Theater mainstay. Emma Jane Hansen (Countess de Lage) was last seen in "Under The Yum Yum Tree" and Evelyn Hughes (Jane) was in "Stop The World" this summer.

Brenda Handy (Crystal), Frankie Bakun (Miriam), Peg Ross (Lucy) and Diane Young (Little Mary) are newcomers entrusted with major roles. Doubling in several parts to round out the 28 characters of the cast are Marina Curtis, Becky Douglas, Patti Holland, Mary Payne and Faith Van Woerkom.

The rapid movement of the action from one location to another, including a dude ranch near Reno and the celebrated bathtub scene, has required an ingenious set design by Paul Boczkowski to fit the Studio stage.

Under the direction of Bill Asp, "The Women" will play Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at the Studio through November 1. The early curtain time on Sunday will continue.

An evening of wolf films at Brey Hall on Sunday

An evening of wolf films, plus a recording of wolf "singing", plus the opportunity to meet two real wolves are the program offered the public by Canadian & American Wolf Defenders on Sunday, September 20 at 8:00 p.m., at Brey Hall, Carmel High School.

"We are presenting this program," stated Mrs. Victor Colton, president of the local conservation society, "because we feel that the public, especially children, are interested in wolves, and have a right to know more about this really quite fabulous creature which is now in danger of extinction."

One of the films, "Your Yard - Their Sheep", a sound-color film, has won several important awards in the documentary field. The other films are rarely-seen documentaries loaned Canadian & American Wolf Defenders by nationally known wolf experts, and are, according to Mrs. Colton, very thrilling.

There will be no admission, and the public is cordially invited.

'All Quiet' starts MPC series

Monterey Peninsula College's "great classics" film series begins tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the college theater with the showing of "All Quiet on the Western Front," a film which won two Academy Awards in 1930.

The second film in the series, Jean Renoir's 1937 anti-war masterpiece, "Grand Illusion," will be shown Saturday, same time and place.

Series tickets at $10 for general admission and $8 for MPC students with student body cards are available in the community services office in the administration building on campus. Mail orders containing checks made out to "Monterey Peninsula College" should be sent to MPC Community Services, 980 Fremont, Monterey. Phone inquiries may be made at 375-9821, Ext. 335.

Single performances are $1.25 for general admission and 75 cents for MPC student body card holders.

Sunrise to Sunset

The rousing notes of Sousa's little known George Washington's Bi-Centennial March rang down the finale on our summer Concerts in the Pines. The 28th Fort Ord Army Band closed our 1970 season of many talents, and I, for one, am sorry to see the gates close on these leisurely Sunday afternoons. Contrary to all tradition at Forest, the fog deferred, to a week-day, and it was a season of sunshine and triumphs.

As I watched the sunlight sifting thru the towering traditions of Monterey fame, my mind kept switching to the culturally packed activities at Idlewild, where my daughter enjoyed classes in choral, modern dance, and art, all in outdoor workshops. Why not this lovely Forest in the Pines, I ask myself, and I would like to hear your feeling on this matter. The potential is vast and wide, and the need is great, for not only must we salvage the great beauty of this land, for ecology's sake, but continually enrich the cultural heritage for the sake of future generations.

Speaking of cultural enrichment, the Lecture Series by George Barati, concerning music as related to the arts, explores the parallels between music, painting, poetry and other arts. Enrollment is requested in advance, the first class beginning Sept. 29, 7:30-9:30, six sessions in total. Focus will be upon major musical styles with correlations drawn from paintings, architecture, sculpture, plays, poetry, novels. This should prove to be an exciting series; come join us.

Friends of Photography will feature "A Photographers Collection" (Prints from the Personal Collection of Ansel Adams) at Sunset Center, through Oct. 25. To quote this great photographer in the field in which he excels, "I hope that this exhibit will stir others to collect fine prints, and build a resource of images which have a real and continuing meaning. Those images of intangible value without reference to time, style or monetary worth may give the collector greatest satisfaction and, perhaps, achieve a final importance far beyond their temporal significance."

Won't you join Friends of Photography and share the wonderful collections of a very great photographer and a really great human being? For further information, please call 624-6330.

Paris-trained mime instructor comes to Carmel Valley

Jack Albee stopped off in Carmel Valley on his way to the 'Pleasure Faire' at Agoura near Los Angeles. He has decided to linger here and teach mime at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

The art of pantomime has apparently thrilled the children who are taking his classes. They go home with their white faces like hob-goblins at Hallowe'en, causing dismay at every turn.

Albee, who has trained in Paris with the master mime teacher, Etienne Decroux, performs in Los Angeles and at both Pleasure Faires in Marin and Ventura counties.

"If students have had ballet or other dance forms they are already half way there in mime. Some kids have a natural ability at mimicry," he says.

"The area of mime is virtually wide open. There are so few mimes ... and the art is so extraordinary."

"Children have not yet learned to stifle all their spontaneity and they learn quickly. I am very impressed," he added, "at the concentration and seriousness of the kids here, most of whom so far have been trained in ballet by Patricia Wester."

Classes meet on Thursday and Friday for all age groups at the Youth Center.

LEGAL NOTICE

PUBLIC NOTICE
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons having any interest in the matter that the Planning Commission of the City of Carmel-By-the-Sea, California, will conduct a Public Hearing in the City Council Chambers of said City on Wednesday, October 21, 1970, at the hour of 4:00 o'clock p.m. or as soon thereafter as interested persons may be heard:

To consider an Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance Amending the Gasoline Service Station Overlay Zone Limiting the Numbers and Locations of Said Service Stations and Amortizing Existing Non-Conforming Stations."

That Section 1305.9 of the Municipal Code of the City of Carmel-By-the-Sea is proposed to be amended by the addition of the following subsection:

1305.9.3 GASOLINE SERVICE STATION USE - NUMBER PERMITTED. Due to the small and intimate nature of the commercial district of the City, and the desire to retain its village character, the City finds that an excessive number of gasoline service stations is detrimental to the public health, safety, and welfare in that traffic hazards are created by additional off-street automobile entrances and exits, large tanker trucks making deliveries, and street parking of customer vehicles. For these reasons no more than eight (8) gasoline service stations excluding stations incorporated into an underground parking facility shall be permitted after September 1, 1970.

1305.9.4 GASOLINE SERVICE STATION USE - AMORTIZATION OF NON-COMFORMING USES. For the reasons set forth in Section 1305.9.3, and for the further reason that existing non-conforming service station uses depress property values in the commercial district and detrimentally affect the economy of the City, it is hereby determined that the original investment in said uses has been recovered many times over, and that the normal useful remaining life of existing non-conforming service station uses is ten (10) years from the date of July 1, 1970. For the reasons stated, all non-conforming gasoline service station uses existing on July 1, 1970, shall be discontinued and further use prohibited by no later than July 1, 1980.

Section 2. That Section 1305.9.1 shall be amended by the addition of a new sub-section that shall read as follows:

(E) After July 1, 1970, no service station shall be constructed or reconstructed at any intersection where a service station already exists.

BY JUDITH EISNER

Dogs and cats are remarkably sturdy creatures, but accidents happen. They break bones just as humans do, and often because of strange errors in judgment; an animal needn't be struck by a car to sustain a broken bone.

Small dogs, especially those of the toy group, often run amuck of their owners. These little dogs get stepped on by those great big human feet and their small, rather delicate foot bones are no match for a well-shod foot. Because toys are usually kept indoors and permitted the luxury of human laps and sofas, they also run the added risk of snapping a leg bone in a clumsy leap from a height.

Large dogs suffer because their legs must bear the weight of their bodies during stress. A big dog may miscalculate a turn while running, have a leg double under him, and his weight and momentum may break the leg.

Cats, too, mis-gauge their leaps more frequently than is realized. Most of the time, they return to earth from garage roofs, mantelpieces and trees with impunity, but not always.

Whatever the situation that caused the break, you can administer first aid before the vet takes over. The most important thing you can do -- and the animal will probably cooperate -- is keep him as quiet as possible and avoid all twisting, changing position and turning.

You can splint a broken leg just as you would a human limb; remember, though, that the function of a splint is to immobilize the limb to prevent the broken bone ends from doing further damage. Only vets can set broken bones properly.

Anything firm can be utilized as a splint. A stick or board, heavy corrugated cardboard or even rolled-up newspapers or a magazine will do.

Having a broken leg splinted is extremely painful. A gauze muzzle is a must for your own protection. Once that is in place, you use gauze bandage or torn strips of any cloth to hold the leg immobile in the splint.

First, wrap several turns of bandage around the limb, above, then below the break. Place the splint alongside the leg, or halfway around it if you are using newspaper or a magazine. Wrap several turns of the bandage firmly around the leg and splint above the break so the limb is secured to the splint. Be careful not to cut off circulation. Then pull very gently on the leg below the break to straighten it. Wrap bandage around leg and splint below the break. Don't bandage at the point of the break itself, as there are sharp, broken bone ends there!

Then, gently as possible, transport the animal to the vet for further treatment.

One of the side-effects or co-effects of any serious injury is the condition known as shock. In dogs and cats, as in humans, symptoms are collapse or weakness; pale to white gums, irregular shallow breathing punctuated by gasps and a weak heartbeat. Often, there is dilation of the pupils and a lowered body temperature which makes the animal feel abnormally cool to the touch.

After controlling bleeding or taking any emergency first aid measures such as artificial respiration or administering poison antidotes, the treatment for shock is to keep the patient warm, quiet and comfortable. Wrap him in a coat or blanket, but don't use artificial heat sources such as electric heating pads or hot water bottles. Usually, the animal will cooperate with your efforts to the point of lying still; he isn't in any condition to struggle too much. Then, transport him to the vet's, where many things can be administered to counteract shock.

We mentioned last week that dogs and cats get into all kinds of scrapes. In cases of electric shock, either a foolish puppy has chewed through a lamp or appliance cord or has, in rare instances, had an outdoor high-tension wire break and fall on him.

The most important thing for you to remember when you discover your dog unconscious and in contact with a wire is not to rush forward and touch the animal. His body will act as a conductor and you will find yourself getting, at very least, an electrical shock.

Inside, either turn off the main power switch before touching the animal or poke the wire away from his body with a non-conductive object -- a dry stick, a rubber-heeled shoe or a loop of dry cloth such as a belt. Don't touch the wire with anything metallic or with your bare hand!

Fortunately, electric shock is usually not a serious injury. After you move the animal to a safe spot, examine him. If he is breathing, don't interfere except to cover him, treat for shock and call the vet. Check to see if he has been badly burned, especially around the mouth.

If he is not breathing, you will want to administer artificial respiration which is done, in animals, very much as it used to be done with humans.

The simplest method is to press down on the dog's chest for two seconds, then release for two seconds. (The animal is lying on his side during this process.) You can also lift the uppermost front leg slightly during the "release" seconds to help expand his chest and lungs.

In cases of suspected broken ribs or internal injuries, you should not press on the chest. Then, the most effective means of artificial respiration is to attempt to force your own breath into his lungs. The best way to do this is to close his mouth, put your lips over his nose and blow gently into his nostrils. If that method seems a bit distasteful, you can use your hand to form a reasonably airtight funnel between your lips and his nose. You cannot blow from a distance; there must be a closed system to force air into his lungs.

Artificial respiration is also used in cases of drowning -- which happens to dogs and cats in spite of the old wives' tale that they can swim; they usually can, but not always far or fast enough to escape drowning.
